

EDITORIAL

The release of volume 6 of the magazine finds us at a very eventful moment. First, the publication "Orientation and Society", which used to be a production by the Psychology Department of the School of Humanities and Educational Sciences of the Universidad Nacional de La Plata, has come to be part of the new School of Psychology since September 2006. This constitutes a milestone in our discipline since, after almost 50 years, we have become an independent Academic Unit, accredited by a long period of high teaching standards, research and community outreach programs. Such an event has caused changes, readjustments and re-dimensions within several academic and management areas, which delayed this publication. These issues were connected with the shortage of economic resources for the implementation of this publishing project. But we've made an effort, hoping to continue this undertaking and we've reached this new volume.

Volume 6 presents two central works:

- Theoretical frames for the new tasks in career guidance and counseling.

Jean Guichand, France

- Work instability perception in a sample of psychologists.

Nora Leibovich de Figueroa

In the case of research advances:

- Crises of social significances: adolescents and their projects for future work.

Norma Delucca - Graciela Petriz

- Text comprehension and production in university students: Text reformulation.

Telma Piacente - Ana María Tittarelli

We have also included a review, investigation abstracts and scientific events.
